The Obama “green new deal” will bring more exploitation and new wars for the US and the entire world proletarians.

The electoral defeat of Mc Cain has an important political meaning: the crisis of the neo-con project that the Republican candidate wanted to continue. To find the principal causes of this, we have to look both at the international and the internal fronts.

On the international side, the social cohesion is beginning to crack. Difficulties in enlisting marines have increased. Immigrants (mainly the “latinos”) feel encouraged to ask for their rights. Part of the white “privileged” working class has begun to understand that they will not be able any longer to maintain their usual tenor of life and that they will be submerged by debts and squeezed by heavier and heavier working conditions.

The Wall Street collapse has strongly contributed to push these social layers to aim to a change of government: Democrats instead of Republicans, indeed, such a wish has found an expression only in terms of electoral mobilization.

To defend our own conditions we need something else. We need a real struggle in working places and in the streets. Obama’s policy goes in the opposite direction of the workers’ expectations.

The truth is that Obama will distribute only poison to the US and to the entire world proletariat. For two main reasons.

First of all: the Asian proletariat crushing will not be easy. “Surgical” and “local” wars will not be enough and the US proletarians will be called massively, more than in Iraq, Yugoslavia and Afghanistan, to shed their blood.

In the second place: the promised “technological and ecological” rising of the “stars-and-stripes” imperialism (the “green new deal”) will lead to unbearable conditions of life for the proletarians even in the USA, and will cause more and more precarious, hard and stressful rhythms and working conditions. Think, for instance, the way the great Detroit car enterprises are facing the crisis: dismissals, cancellation of contracts in force, introduction of working relations inspired to the Walmart model.

The Obama “green new deal” will bring more exploitation and new wars for the US and the entire world proletarians.

Congressional Democrats instead of Republicans, indeed, such a wish has found an expression only in terms of electoral mobilization.

To defend our own conditions we need something else. We need a real struggle in working places and in the streets. Obama’s policy goes in the opposite direction of the workers’ expectations.

The truth is that Obama will distribute only poison to the US and to the entire world proletariat. For two main reasons.

First of all: the Asian proletariat crushing will not be easy. “Surgical” and “local” wars will not be enough and the US proletarians will be called massively, more than in Iraq, Yugoslavia and Afghanistan, to shed their blood.

In the second place: the promised “technological and ecological” rising of the “stars-and-stripes” imperialism (the “green new deal”) will lead to unbearable conditions of life for the proletarians even in the USA, and will cause more and more precarious, hard and stressful rhythms and working conditions. Think, for instance, the way the great Detroit car enterprises are facing the crisis: dismissals, cancellation of contracts in force, introduction of working relations inspired to the Walmart model.

The Obama “green new deal” will bring more exploitation and new wars for the US and the entire world proletarians.

The electoral defeat of Mc Cain has an important political meaning: the crisis of the neo-con project that the Republican candidate wanted to continue. To find the principal causes of this, we have to look both at the international and the internal fronts.

On the international side, the social cohesion is beginning to crack. Difficulties in enlisting marines have increased. Immigrants (mainly the “latinos”) feel encouraged to ask for their rights. Part of the white “privileged” working class has begun to understand that they will not be able any longer to maintain their usual tenor of life and that they will be submerged by debts and squeezed by heavier and heavier working conditions.

The Wall Street collapse has strongly contributed to push these social layers to aim to a change of government: Democrats instead of Republicans, indeed, such a wish has found an expression only in terms of electoral mobilization.

To defend our own conditions we need something else. We need a real struggle in working places and in the streets. Obama’s policy goes in the opposite direction of the workers’ expectations.

The truth is that Obama will distribute only poison to the US and to the entire world proletariat. For two main reasons.

First of all: the Asian proletariat crushing will not be easy. “Surgical” and “local” wars will not be enough and the US proletarians will be called massively, more than in Iraq, Yugoslavia and Afghanistan, to shed their blood.

In the second place: the promised “technological and ecological” rising of the “stars-and-stripes” imperialism (the “green new deal”) will lead to unbearable conditions of life for the proletarians even in the USA, and will cause more and more precarious, hard and stressful rhythms and working conditions. Think, for instance, the way the great Detroit car enterprises are facing the crisis: dismissals, cancellation of contracts in force, introduction of working relations inspired to the Walmart model.

The Obama “green new deal” will bring more exploitation and new wars for the US and the entire world proletarians.

The electoral defeat of Mc Cain has an important political meaning: the crisis of the neo-con project that the Republican candidate wanted to continue. To find the principal causes of this, we have to look both at the international and the internal fronts.

On the international side, the social cohesion is beginning to crack. Difficulties in enlisting marines have increased. Immigrants (mainly the “latinos”) feel encouraged to ask for their rights. Part of the white “privileged” working class has begun to understand that they will not be able any longer to maintain their usual tenor of life and that they will be submerged by debts and squeezed by heavier and heavier working conditions.

The Wall Street collapse has strongly contributed to push these social layers to aim to a change of government: Democrats instead of Republicans, indeed, such a wish has found an expression only in terms of electoral mobilization.

To defend our own conditions we need something else. We need a real struggle in working places and in the streets. Obama’s policy goes in the opposite direction of the workers’ expectations.

The truth is that Obama will distribute only poison to the US and to the entire world proletariat. For two main reasons.

First of all: the Asian proletariat crushing will not be easy. “Surgical” and “local” wars will not be enough and the US proletarians will be called massively, more than in Iraq, Yugoslavia and Afghanistan, to shed their blood.

In the second place: the promised “technological and ecological” rising of the “stars-and-stripes” imperialism (the “green new deal”) will lead to unbearable conditions of life for the proletarians even in the USA, and will cause more and more precarious, hard and stressful rhythms and working conditions. Think, for instance, the way the great Detroit car enterprises are facing the crisis: dismissals, cancellation of contracts in force, introduction of working relations inspired to the Walmart model.

The Obama “green new deal” will bring more exploitation and new wars for the US and the entire world proletariat.